a body of local residents were of opinion that the best way of ascertaining the value of the wood, from the accounts that had been furnished in a mass of letters from the various towns, was to send a committee to each of the towns, and to have them report to the Council of the Admiralty. The Admiralty, however, was of opinion that the best way of ascertaining the value of the wood, from the accounts that had been furnished in a mass of letters from the various towns, was to send a committee to each of the towns, and to have them report to the Council of the Admiralty. JOSEPH MURDER.—Some excitement has been in in the town of Walsingham, in the county of Norfolk, on account of the discovery of the remains of the two orphan children of Walsingham in a field at the Bradwell Farm, in the parish of Walsingham. It seems that on Tuesday several men went to the pit, a short distance from the turnpike-road, with a view of turning water-cresses, when their attention was led to an unusual substance floating on the top near the water near the side of the pit, which, on being proved to be the leg and thigh of a child. The bodies afterwards emerged, and were found lying on their sides, and imbedded in the mud. They were subsequently examined by two medical men, and proved to be those of two children—namely, a child of from eighteen months or two years of age, and a child of from five to six years of age. The composition of the bodies, it is not understood, they have been immersed in the water twelve to eighteen months, and probably there is little doubt that there has been some foul play in this transaction. The bodies were sent to the coroner at present shrouded in the mystery. At the coroner's inquest, which took place on the day following, nothing was adduced to throw any light on the occurrence. The coroner returned a verdict—"That the bodies were the subjects of the pit, and how they got there they came there no evidence appeared to the jury."
