America, performed the same service at a public meeting in Dublin. If Mr Comerford be not a degenerate son he must join the Irish Democratic Confederation, the only society of Irishmen now in existence that advocates his society of Irishmen now in existence that advocates his father's principles, and those of his co-patriots who

the policy of Irishmen now in existence that advocates his other's principles, and those of his co-partisans who travoured every danger to establish democracy in their native land. However, Sir, our course must be a straightforward one, and by strictly turning to the right to the left, we may hope shortly to attract the attention of such men as the Rev. Mr. Kenjoy, who will not go down drag in the train of hypocrites and knaves, as he has done before; and by steady and determined perseverance, we may yet bridge over the gulph by creating such a union of the ruling and the ruled, as will make the tyrants of the earth tremble, and the despots of the air, remain, dear Sir, yours very respectfully, Mr. L. T. Glancy. MICHAEL SKEAVALA.

The following are the names of the officers appointed at our meeting.—Robert O'Neill, John O'Leary, Edward Heath, William Henry, John Trafford, John McCoy, Thomas Crick, Patrick Connor, act-treasurer; Michael McGrave, act-secretary.

Barzilly.

A highly respectable and numerous meeting of this evening was held on Sunday evening, at Cartwright's, the Vice-President in the chair.

MR. CLANCY rose to bring before the meeting the case of Mr. Hamill the secretary of the Irish Education Society, who had accepted the office of Sub-Inspector of Irish Schools, on the Board of Education in Ireland. He (Mr. C.) considered his duty would be shrinking from the performance of his duty were he to allow a transaction of this description to go unopposed. Mr. C. entered into the history of the Confederation from its formation up to the present time, showing the appointment by the council of Mr. Hamill as secretary at the salary of £100 a year, and a salary of £150 advance, with furnished quarters. They had only been paid to said secretary £100. Mr. Hamill positively refused to accept of it. But what must be their astonishment now to hear that Mr. Hamill never was secretary: nay—more, they have actually discovered that he was not even a member of the body! The following appeared in last week's Nation:

MR. RUSSELL to GOVERN.—That Mr. Hamill never was secretary of the Confederation; that at the time he was doing business in our city, it was under the honorary secretaries, Messrs O'Connell and Pugh; that he became so disconnected from us on the 1st of June last, since when the council have had control over him, and that the situation Mr. Hamill obtained was not given him, at the recommendation of any member of the Confederation.

This was a very short paragraph yet it contained less than three false statements. Either Mr. Hamill was secretary, or he was not; if he was secretary he was not disconnected from us as he is false; if he was not secretary then it was a misapprehension of the funds to pay him. On June last the editor of the Nation asserted that Hamill had got this situation. Mr.
McGea, at public meeting the following week in Dublin, stated that was a great bigotie of the Pilot's; that the poor dear gentleman was lying sick in the country &c.; but after all it turns out that the great lie had some little truth in it. (Cheers.) Mr. C. concluded by moving the following resolution:—

Resolved, That having duly considered the confession of the Council of the Confederation with respect to the appointment of Mr. Hamill as Secretary of Irish Schools under the Board of Education, deem it duty to express our disapprobation of the council in withdrawing their paid secretary, after receiving the sub-port as an officer of the Confederation, and that we re always considered their rules; which they call fundamental principles as vague, abstract and unstable.

This resolution was adopted.
 A resolution was then proposed and carried, expressive of confidence in Feargus O'Connor, Esq., P.; denouncing his enemies, and calling upon the working classes to repudiate the villainous journals which have assailed that gentleman. Several speeches were delivered in support of this resolution, in which the speakers expressed their enthusiastic admiration of Mr. O'Connor.
 Mr. M. CARTHY, in the course of his address, said that on his trade was out on the strike they went to Dispatch to get an article inserted, and they had modestly to demand £3; they went to the Star ere they got the whole for nothing at all (cheers).
 Mr. John Cleave, of Shoe-lane, paid in a year's subscription and was enrolled a member amidst much applause. A vote of thanks moved by Mr. Sullivan was seconded by Mr. M. C. C. and was unanimously carried; that gentleman for 50 copies of Emmet's speech which he presented, to be sold for the benefit of his society.

IRISH CONFEDERATION.

By the decision of His Holiness, the Pope, respecting the Irish Colleges is looked upon by the Confederates of this metropolis as a good omen, with regard to Ireland. As it is now generally believed that the Pope has granted one concession to the Irish government without commencing a general policy towards misgoverned Ireland, that will immediately lead to its regeneration. Lord Minto in that event, have to return to England, just as well as when he left it.

THE WESTMINSTER CONFEDERATES, on Sunday evening last, the 21th inst., held their weekly meeting at the Charter Coffee-house, Stratton Ground. Mr. Miller Davis, Governor of the Irish, was extra-ordinarily present. Mr. M. C. C. was unanimously elected in regard to establishing English interest in Ireland having been read, the Chairman said that he was happy to state that Mr. Johnson, from Brighton, present, and that gentleman had informed him that Confederation meetings were held in Brighton, also were meetings for the benefit of the Scotch nation with England. The first announcement was received with loud cheers.

THE CONFEDERATES.—At a meeting of this body, held at Mr. O'Donnell's, 4, St. George's-street, Finsbury-road, on Sunday week, Mr. Dunne, ex-Republican, delivered an eloquent address. A large number of members joined the Confederation.

At the meeting of this body on Sunday last, Mr. h. Dunne having addressed the meeting in his own eloquent style. Several persons were enrolled, and the meeting was adjourned.

Mr. Miller Davis, Governor of the Irish, having been announced for the last three weeks that E. Kenealy, was to deliver a lecture:—"The Vindication of the Irish Parliament." On Monday evening, the 21st inst., but which had been postponed to the following Monday, owing to that gentleman being detained in the country by his professional duties. At the Assembly Rooms, 83, Dean-street, Soho, were crowded to an overflow. Mr. T. O'Mahoney was elected to the chair. The reading was amply sustained by the eloquence of Mr. Davis. By listening to the proceedings of the late meeting of the Sarsfield Club, at Limerick, Dr. O'Connor, M.D., on that evening, said that he had been induced to come forward, reading on account of reading that their meetings were held in this metropolis in private houses instead of public houses. He had no objection to a house being used for this purpose, but on his own side and the principles of both old and young Ireland, he said that he saw such men as Dr. Kane, of Kilkenny, speaking over the meeting of the Confederation in Dublin, and W. S. O'Brien, Esq., M.P., in Limerick, he could no longer withhold his support: that a body which he believed had the cause of Ireland at heart. The learned Doctor continued to address the meeting on great length, denouncing the despotic policy of the Irish place-hunters, and showing that the Confederates, by pursuing their present policy, would ultimately bring into their ranks those who had kept aloof from the moral force party on account of its sectarian character. The learned gentleman, during his address, was received with rapturous applause. Mr. T. Daly then announced to the meeting that as soon as the committee had received the names of the persons put to Mr. M. C. C. the meetings would be held in the City, Clerkenwell, St. Luke's, and several other districts, where the members were pining to commence the good work of Ireland's regeneration, and England's prosperity. Several persons having enrolled themselves, amongst whom was Dr. O'Connor, the meeting adjourned.

DUNBAR CHURCH.—At a meeting of this body on Sunday evening last, at the Charter Coffee-house, Stratton Ground, and in the evening of the 21st inst. on the Confederation was read from the Northern Star. The latter was received with loud applause.

Mr. O'Mahony was received with loud applause.

STAPLEY.—Mr. John West delivered a most interesting and convincing address to a numerous and attentive audience, on Sunday evening last, in the Charlistad Plan, Stapley-street. He went into a charge of the "Whistler," and one after another demolished them, to the entire satisfaction of the crowded meeting. After an unanimous vote of thanks to Mr. West for his talented address, the meeting separated.

STAPLEY BRIDGE.—Mr. J. West, of Stapley, delivered a lecture on Friday, the 22nd inst. The lecture, which took place in the Charlistad Plan, was well attended, and was received with much interest. The lecture was well attended, and was received with much interest.

because the condition of the great bulk of the people was deplorable. He exhibited the fallacy of the Free Trade doctrine, and related an anecdote of an Irishman, who was boasting of the fertility of the soil, and said, "that in his country there could be a cabbage and a score of potatoes for 4d. Well, then, why, said a bystander, 'did you not stop in your own country?' Because he could not stop in it! He enquired Mr O'Connor as the sterling champion of civil rights, who had displayed his undaunted firmness in aid of oppression. Mr Shaw concluded amidst loud applause. A vote of thanks was then moved, and passed amidst acclamation to the chairman for his able reading, and also to the lecturer for his very talented lecture. The meeting then separated.

FRIENDS.—If ever there was a time when there was a greater necessity for combination amongst the working classes, than at the present time, for never in the annals of this country, were manufacturers so determined and so universally attempting to force down the price of industry as at this time. On the right hand and on the left, in the east and in the west, in the north and in the south, is this work of reduction and impoverishment going forward, day after day, and of the most serious character, which if not obviated will entail upon us, for years to come, the most acute sufferings and deprivations, and thus cripple our associative operations for the amelioration and improvement of our degraded and humiliating position.

And without a determined and well-timed effort on the part of the working classes themselves, they will be plunged over head and ears into irretrievable difficulties, while a combination of evil circumstances and hostile operations will be arrayed and directed against you, to perpetuate your sufferings, and to extort your labour from you at a price infinitely below its value. To do so is the interest of capitalists; it enriches them, but makes you poor indeed.

If, however, you would obstruct the growth and spread of despotism, and mitigate the evils of organised capitalists against you, you must meet them nobly and determinedly in combination, and by a vigorous and an active co-operation, you will be able to counteract the tyrannical attempts of your task masters, and repress the outrageous reductions that are stalking abroad at noon-day without a blush. But if you refuse to co-operate; if you decline in combination, and tamely submit to see your rights and your principles wrenched from you, then, indeed, may you prepare for the oppressor to ride roughshod over you, and to overwhelm in distress and poverty your wives and children. But we trust that such things will not be, that you will sympathise with and aid each other to avert such fearful calamities, and endeavour to smooth each other's path by friendly exertion and by a spirited co-operation. Should you refuse to do this, should you decline to assist each other, who else, we would ask, will assist you? Who will stretch out a helping hand to save you? If you trust to others to do that for you which you must do for yourselves, you will trust to a rotten staff, and the moment you fall upon it for support it will snap under you, and at once precipitate you into an insupportable gulch of unextinguishable despair. You must not, however, trust to any. You must rely entirely upon your own energy, and from that source alone will your redemption come.

How often have we told you that the elevation of your own condition depends upon yourselves; that in the work of the social and moral regeneration of the industrial classes, every member has a certain work to do, a part to act, which no one but himself can perform, and which if not done by him he inflicts a proportionable amount of injury upon society, and, consequently, will impede the progress of emancipation.

Some may say that they cannot see what they can do in the work, or what office they can fill in such a movement; to reply we would say, the most humble who is willing to labour, will find something suitable to his capacities, and in fulfilling his duties, will aid in promoting and consummating the objects of this combination.

Our machinery is so extensive, and our operations so diversified, that none, however low or despised, need despair of finding employment for the exercise of his powers, for the diffusion of good, and for the recovery of labour's rights. A crooked rascal will help to turn an engine, when a straight one would not. And if every working man will only try, he will find ample room to be beneficially engaged.

The individual co-operation of the entire operative classes is indispensable to the perfecting of our redemption; and that co-operation must be concentrated and centralised, and every one labouring with the precision of a disciplined army; as they must necessarily be when acting under the direction of one head for one common good.

The beneficial and effective tendency of such concentrated and centralised operations must appear to all. For instance, take a body of armed men, whose object it is to repress the aggression of an invading army. To insure success, the forces are marshalled, and taught one uniform discipline, they organise, concentrate, and centralise the individual parts of the army, with such exactness and precision that one head, one commander, and even the sound of a trumpet or the beating of a drum, will set in motion one mighty mass of human beings, for the attainment of one object; and by such uniform and centralised operations, the invading army is routed, and compelled to retreat from the field of their revolting undertakings.

Now, if a centralised power is so efficient in our military forces, must it not be as productive of good, when adopted and carried out by the working-classes, for the protection of their industry?

Your rights, your privileges, your industry, your domestic happiness, the quietude and comfort of your family circles, has long, and is still invaded, and assailed by hostile capitalists; and to thwart their purposes of cruelty, their paralysing, and at the same time unjustifiable innovations upon your most sacred rights, demands that you should adopt this centralised power, by marshalling your forces—by organising and consolidating your sectional energies, upon one grand and national point; and at the command of one head, with one voice, and with one heart, go forth to meet your assailants.

By doing so, success would be certain, victory would be inevitable. It must be by this, and by no other means, that your rights will be conserved, your industry guarded, and heartless invaders be repulsed, and compelled to shrink back from the perpetration of their cruel deeds.

You may object to such operations if you like—you may refuse to co-operate with us upon such a principle if you choose; but you will be the sufferer by your refusal, and you will be the sufferer if you prefer your sectional endeavours to fight the battles of your attempt, and the superior power of capital will force you into submission, and become stronger in proportion as you become weaker.

In confirmation of this, we refer you to past experience. Enquire the history of your local operations, and mark well the result; ponder over your strongest combinations, and your contentions with capitalists, and we predict, that the review will sadden your hearts, and the repeated discomfitures you have experienced will extort from you (it may be involuntary) a sigh. The many miserable failures attendant upon our sectional struggles to protect industry, ought for ever to inspire us with a consciousness of their utter inadequacy to obtain for us, 'A fair day's wages, for a fair day's work.'

Under this investigation, should you still doubt the inefficiency of merely local unions, we would refer for a still further proof of this incompetency, to the continuous decline in the price of industry. You have had your local combinations—you have subscribed your hundreds and thousands of pounds, and you have as cheerfully expended those subscriptions in laudable efforts to better your condition. But what good have you derived? You may, in some instances have obtained your demands; but such victories have been very short-lived; for what capitalists have given you with one hand, they have taken back with the other; and when exhausted with struggling, you have fallen helpless victims to the cupidity of your employers. And now, with all our engagements, and with all the advantages derivable from your sectional operations, you are in an infinitely worse position than you were ever known to be. You are working more hours, (even when trade is good) and earning less wages, than you were doing twenty or thirty years ago. Your position has been gradually growing worse, and the price of your labour gradually becoming less. These may be painful reflections, but, at the same time, they are positive and undeniable proofs of the entire inefficiency of local unions, and point out the absolute necessity there is for the adoption of a more extensive plan, to secure to industry a proper reward. Such a plan, to be successful, must be commensurate with the objects to be attained; and again yield to the crushing hand of tyranny.

Now, such a plan, is the National Association. Its object is to organise the local trade bodies in one extensive combination, and by arranging, concentrating, and centralising the divided energies of the people; that their power, thus consolidated, may be brought to bear on behalf of the weak and oppressed sons of toil.

[That this plan is a practical one, we have not the slightest doubt; and when the whole machinery is set in full motion, will work out the regeneration of the present victims of wretchedness, of tyranny, and wrong.]

To those who cannot appreciate the importance of our plans, we would say, calmly examine our principles, weigh well our plans of operation, and if you detect anything wrong, anything defective, help us to put it right; assist us in perfecting one of the most praiseworthy associations, and an association too, that is well calculated to procure the rights, and enhance the interests of the industrious. But, if you will not assist in this, let us beseech you not to prevent others from doing so. If you will not labour for the general good of the working-classes yourself, allow others to do so who are inclined; for we think the social and physical condition of the people is sufficiently degraded, without any attempting to make it worse, by opposing the efforts and plans set in operation for their emancipation.

To those who are with us, we say, be constant, vigorous, determined, and persevering in your exertions, and you may look for and ultimately enjoy a rich reward.

The time when we must be up and doing, is come, and if we relax in duty, or shrink from our labour, we shall fail in the accomplishment of our objects, and if we do, depend upon it, we shall find no quarter with capitalists, or mercy at the hands of our task-masters; we must double our diligence, and make our salvation and independence sure.

isted, to the entire satisfaction of the meeting. He also explained the position of Mr Jacobs, in connection with the Association. The meeting then unanimously passed a vote of confidence in the Central Committee.

On Thursday, Mr Robson met the canvassers, and after making a few remarks, he adjourned the meeting, and resolved to pay their arrears at once.

On Friday, Mr Robson attended a meeting of the chair-makers and nail-makers of Winton, when he was decanted at length upon the objects of the Association, and showed its practicability and beneficial tendency. The meeting expressed the utmost satisfaction at the explanations.

The horse-nail makers of this village have been on strike for the last twelve weeks for an advance, they having been paid less for their work than other nail makers in the district. Any trade in a position to do those brave men struggling for their rights, can do so by addressing Mr Summerside, horse-nail-maker, Winton.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—Mr Robson attended the chair-makers; the meeting was well attended, and the result a vote of confidence in the Central Committee, and a determination to push the principles of the Association to the best of their ability. He waited upon the canvassers and gave the greatest satisfaction, and they decided upon paying up their arrears as early as possible. On Monday evening, he waited upon the boot and shoe makers of the above town, when after a long discussion, they passed a resolution to join the Association. He then proceeded to Sunderland, where he attended a meeting of the chair-makers, and other bodies. He addressed them at some length, defending the Central Committee in reference to the Holytown miners, and the charges of Mr Jacobs, giving the greatest satisfaction, the result of which was, they passed resolutions of confidence in the Central Committee, the Association, and the honourable president. He also attended a very large meeting of the ship carpenters in the Athenaeum, addressed them at some length, in explanation of the principles of the Association.

He also attended a meeting of the Central Committee, which would have appeared in last week's Northern Star, but for an unusual press of matter.

possesses those feelings of benevolence, honesty, philanthropy, and attachment to his country, which every consistent member of society ought to cherish, to show by his conduct, the extent to which he holds the time-serving, manner-loving, wealth-hunting press, that press which has ventured to denounce a subject repugnant to improvement, every health, happiness, and independence of honest industry. Commenting on the Land Plan, the lecturer showed the necessity of the Land Plan; its adaptation to the wants and necessities of the present state of society; 3rd, the advantages to be enjoyed physically, morally, intellectually, socially, and politically; 4th, the means to be employed, and their ultimate
