A GREAT RADICAL DEMONSTRATION

WILL BE MADE, ON KESWICK MOOR, on Monday, Sept. 24, 1838,

IN FAVOUR OF UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE,
ANNUAL PARLIAMENTS, VOTE BY BALLOT, WAGES FOR MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT, AND NO PROPERTY QUALIFICATION!

MEN OF MANCHESTER AND THE SURROUNDING DISTRICTS!—The time has come when the body of the suffering millions of this great Empire must prepare themselves for a grand display of moral power and physical energy; the People, conscious of their strength, and animated by a sense of their duty to their God, their Country, and their Queen, must bravely, honestly, and legally assert their ancient and inalienable rights, and, as did their forefathers of old, nobly resolve to live Freemen rather than die Slaves.

WOMEN OF MANCHESTER AND THE SURROUNDING DISTRICTS!—Recollect! that on your exertions depend the success of this glorious enterprise. You are called upon to exert your great influence in the cause of Universal Freedom, for on that depends the happiness and prosperity of you and your families. Rally round the standard of Liberty placed upon the heights of Keswick Moor, and show by your attachment to the cause of Freedom, that you are determined not to be idle in the holy work of rectifying the wrongs of your country.

Radical Reformers! Recollect! Your Motto must be—
"PEACE! LAW! ORDER."

At a Delegate Meeting, held on Monday, September 24, the following Resolutions were agreed to, Dr. FLETCHER, of Bury, in the Chair.

1. That a Great Demonstration of the Radical Reformers of Manchester and the surrounding Districts, be made on Keswick Moor, on Monday, the 24th of September, 1838, in favour of Universal Suffrage, Annual Parliaments, Vote by Ballot, No Property Qualification, and Wages for Attendance of Members of Parliament.
2. That the Radical Reformers do assemble in Manchester, on Monday, the 24th September, at Ten o'clock, to march in Procession from thence to Keswick Moor.
3. That the Chair be taken at Eleven o'clock precisely.
4. That the National Petition already numerous signed in different districts of the United Kingdom, and containing all the great principles above alluded to, and also the People's Charter, recommended by the Working Men's Association of London, and embodying the same principles in the form of a Bill in Parliament, be submitted to the approbation of the meeting.
5. That each district named in the public advertisement, in South Lancashire, is hereby requested to call a public meeting, and to elect a Delegate to attend the National Convention, and to send the name of that Delegate to the Chairman of the next Delegate Meeting in Manchester.

6. That no Delegate can be legally appointed by any Political Union, or other associated body, but that every such delegate must be appointed at a public meeting of the inhabitants generally, and of her establishments in the neighbourhood, by respectfully requested to close or suspend their works on the day of the meeting, for the purpose of giving their workmen the opportunity of attending.

R. B. COBBETT, Hon. Sec.
The Committee are anxious to learn from the Organized Trades and other bodies, in Manchester and the neighbouring Towns and Villages, what number will attend the Demonstration from each body or place—the number of their principal Flags and Banners—their descriptions and devices—their Bands and other paraphernalia likely to be used on the occasion, on or before Friday, the 21st, in order that there may be proper arrangements for their disposal at the place of meeting.

ORDER OF PROCESSION.
The Members of the Manchester Political Union, with the United Trades and Radicals of the District, will assemble in Swan-street, at Ten o'clock. The Oldham District will halt at the New Cross at the same time. The Ashton and Hyde Districts at Ancoats Bridge. The Stockport and Macclesfield District, at the end of Port-street, to wait the signal from the Marshals to fall into their respective places during the march, which will be exactly at a Quarter past Ten o'clock, down Witley Grove, Fennel-street, Hunt's Bank, up the New Bury Road. The Rochdale District will march through Middleton, the nearest way to the place of meeting. The Bury District to enter the ground by the Highway to the Moor. The Bolton District down the Bolton Road, over Agercroft Bridge, on to the Moor, by the Griffin and Turf Tavern. The Leigh District to join the Bolton Procession at the end of Agercroft Lane. The whole to move to their respective stations on the ground, according to previous arrangements, and to be under the control of the Marshals.

EDW. NIGHTINGALE, { Marshals.
R. J. RICHARDSON, {
The Committee strongly urge upon the Radicals the necessity of keeping the peace, and refraining from committing the slightest damage, and upon no account to make use of any of the Stands or other elevations on the Moor, except such hustings as may be provided.

SOCIALISM.

THREE LECTURES on the above Subject, will be delivered at SOUTH-PARADE CHAPEL, by the Rev. J. E. GILES, in the following order:

- I. Socialism, considered as a Religious Theory, irrational and absurd.
- II. The Moral Tendencies of Socialism and Christianity compared.
- III. Socialism, considered as a Political Theory, and its effects on the present interests, and ruinous to his immortal hopes.

VALUABLE PUBLICATIONS.

This Day is Published, Price Two SHILLINGS, handsomely bound in Cloth, FIFTEEN LESSONS

ON THE ANALOGY AND SYNTAX OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE, for the Use of Adult Persons who have neglected the Study of Grammar.

BY WILLIAM HILL.

Third Edition revised and amended.

The Author has great pleasure in presenting, at a reduced price, this new and improved Edition of his work, to the many who have enquired for it, during the short time it has been out of the Press.

In these Lessons, the abstruse and unmeaning technicalities which pervade all other Works on Grammar are exchanged for terms which have a definite and precise meaning, illustrative of the things they represent. The Parts of speech are arranged on an entirely new Principle, founded on a Philosophical Consideration of the Nature of Language, and applicable to all Languages. The necessary Divisions and Subdivisions are rationally accounted for—and the Principles of Universal Grammar demonstrated so fully, that the meanest capacity may understand them.

In Syntax, the formation of the English Language is exclusively consulted, without any unnecessary reference to other Languages. A majority of the numerous Rules given in the Grammar are shown to be little better than a heap of senseless Tautology. The necessary Rules are demonstrated upon rational Principles, and illustrated by a variety of Examples.

ALSO, BY THE SAME AUTHOR,
Price One Shilling, bound in Cloth,
THE RATIONAL SCHOOL GRAMMAR AND ENTERTAINING CLASS BOOK.

This Work was written at the request of many Parents and Schoolmasters, who being desirous of using the Author's former work, "Fifteen Lessons, &c." in the Education of their children, complained that, being written for Adults, its style was not well suited for the youthful mind; they regretted, therefore, that it could not be made so universally useful as it otherwise might have been. For the omission, therefore, of this objection, the "Rational School Grammar" is so written as to amuse while it instructs. The principle of the Work is precisely that of the Author's "Fifteen Lessons, &c." Taking out merely the controversial part, all that can be said of that Work may be said, with equal force and propriety of this; while its style and diction are perfectly within the scope of an ordinary youthful mind, in which they are calculated to excite a deep interest and, consequently, to rivet the attention, whilst they communicate information which must, therefore, indelibly impress the memory.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR, ALSO,
Price One Shilling, bound in Cloth, a Second Edition of PROGRESSIVE EXERCISES,

SELECTED FROM THE BEST ENGLISH AUTHORS, AND SO ARRANGED AS TO ACCORD WITH THE RESPECTIVE LESSONS IN EACH OF THE FOREGOING WORKS.

This Work is a valuable and necessary accompaniment to either of the foregoing ones. It is so arranged that the exercises therein contained suit either the "Rational School Grammar" for children or the "Fifteen Lessons" for Adults. A graduation of principles is carefully observed; so that no lesson of the exercises shall anticipate any information in succeeding lessons of the Grammar.

Also, in the Press, and will be published speedily, by the same Author, price Fourpence,
A NEW EDITION OF THE GRAMMATICAL TEXT BOOK,

FOR THE USE OF SCHOOLS.

This little Book consists of an enumeration of precepts, or bare, naked principles for the memory. It contains all that is necessary to be remembered on the subject of Grammar, and is well adapted as a companion to the "Rational School Grammar"—the one addressing the memory, only and the other almost exclusively the understanding.

Also, this day is published, price Threepence,
THE PECULIAR SANCTITY OF THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH,

A SERMON,
DELIVERED IN BETHEL CHAPEL, HULL,

BY WILLIAM HILL, MINISTER OF THE SAID CHAPEL.

In this discourse, the long agitated question of the propriety of teaching writing and accounts, in Sabbath Schools, is completely set at rest. The authority, precept and practice of the Lord Jesus Christ are shown to have a direct tendency to the Establishment of the Custom.

The whole of the above Works may be had of JOSUUA HOBSON, Northern Star Office, Leeds; of ABEL HEYWOOD, and MESSRS. BANKS and Co. Manchester; or of CLAUDE, 1, Shoe-lane, HOODSON, 112, Fleet-street, and SIMPSON and MARSHALL, Stationers' Hall Court, London; and all other Booksellers.

LEEDS, AND HUDDERSFIELD.

MR. ESKELL,

Surgeon Dentist, of No. 124, Park Row, Leeds.

RESPECTFULLY announces that he is on a Professional visit to Huddersfield, and for the better accommodation of his friends, has made arrangements to attend that place; and may be consulted in all the branches of DENTAL SURGERY as follows, until further notice:—

EVERY WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY, AT MRS. BENNET'S, YORK PLACE;

And every MONDAY, TUESDAY, FRIDAY, and SATURDAY, at his Residence, 124, Park Row, Leeds.

INCORRIGIBLE MINERAL TEETH.
From one to a complete Set, which are not only Indestructible, but also incapable of Discolouration.

Amongst the advantages of Mr. ESKELL'S System, one of the principal is, that it cures the powers of the most distinct articulation, and submits this as really an advantage of the utmost importance; but when to it is added the capability of biting the hardest substance, without pain; though last, not least, it gives the appearance of juvenility to countenances otherwise of an aged appearance.

Mr. ESKELL wishes to impress upon the Ladies and Gentlemen not to have the least prejudice against his Artificial Teeth. They are both useful and ornamental. His principle is quite different to any other—it conduces to both beauty and comfort.

A new description of MINERAL TEETH, that closely resembles nature. These Mineral Teeth eminently possess every superiority, that can be desired, over the various substances offered to the Public for similar purposes. Their colour is unchangeable, and they may be had in every gradation of shade, to suit any taste that may be remaining in the mouth. In point of economy, the Mineral Teeth will be found highly advantageous to the wearer, as in durability.

Mr. ESKELL avails himself of this opportunity to explain the various species of Disease to which the mouth is liable, according to the principles laid down by the most eminent medical men, convinced that the important and personal appearance cannot fail of being interesting.

SCALING THE TEETH.—This operation, when performed by a skillful Dentist, causes not the least pain; and is effected in order to preserve the Teeth from tartarous effluvia, to keep them pure and white, and to free the breath from any unpleasant odour. This operation should take place occasionally.

CAUTERIZING THE TEETH.—The operation is had recourse to upon the first symptoms of decay, in order to arrest the progress of disease, and which, provided it be done in due time, prevents that acute pain followed by ultimate extraction.

FILLING THE VACUUM OF DECAYED TEETH.—This process is of itself a relief, and easy to endure, preserves the enamel of the Teeth in its primitive state, and entirely prevents any portion of ailment or foul air from entering the cavities, the general source of offensive effluvia.

SEPARATING OF THE TEETH.—The Teeth from want of proper attention, are apt in most persons to close and connect themselves with each other, which is generally the chief cause of decay. In such cases, it is particularly advisable to separate them.—Great care is required in this operation.

FASTENING LOOSE TEETH.—Mr. E. during his course of study, has adopted a mode of fastening loose Teeth, particularly of aged persons, whether arising from neglect or any other cause, which he is happy to say, has proved successful to the full extent of his expectations.

REGULATING THE TEETH.—It is well known that Teeth will often grow too long, and outstretch each other, sometimes protruding themselves beyond the bounds prescribed by the circular formation of the face; under such circumstances, they require regulating, which greatly adds to the agreeable appearance of the countenance, in the laugh, and gives facility to the articulation. The beauty of a well-regulated set of Teeth are so generally acknowledged and admired, that to offer further observation on this head would be superfluous.

FIXING ONE OR MORE TEETH.—The method adopted in this process of replacing Teeth, renders it impossible to discern the artificial from the natural, without wire spring, or showing any fastening whatever.

EXTRACTION OF THE ROOT, OR THE FANGS OF THE TEETH.—Although this operation is often dreaded by the afflicted, from the facility which characterizes the performance of his operation, Mr. E. has been most successful in removing all fearful apprehensions.

FIXING COMPLETE SETS OF TEETH.—Complete Sets, by the assistance of a newly invented spring, which operates with the action of the jaws in mastication, &c., will be found, in every respect, amply competent to supply the place of their predecessors.

Attendance from Ten till Five, at Mrs. Bennet's, York Place, every Wednesday and Thursday, for a period.

against it. He thought it would be proper for the council to address the people of England upon the necessity of avoiding the discussion of the curia or any other law at the present moment. They ought again to tell the people that without Universal Suffrage, which would give them power to make their own laws, they had nothing to hope for; and that they must direct all their energies to the attainment of that great measure. A resolution, he believed, to that effect would be submitted to them, and an address prepared in due course.

THE PETITION. OF THE NATIONAL GUARDS OF FRANCE FOR AN EXTENSION OF THE ELECTORAL FRANCHISE.

"Deputies.—The sovereignty of the people is the principle of the constitution of 1830; and, nevertheless, out of thirty-three millions of French, 180,000 alone participate in the election of the Chamber of Deputies. Of all representative states, France is the least democratic. The electoral franchise is most limited. The present law does not give the electoral franchise to a number of citizens sufficiently great to render the interests of the elector and that of the community at large identical. The interests and rights of the people must hence be, and are, sacrificed to the interests and passions of a few privileged persons. The existing law is an insult to the French nation, and the mark of a brave and intelligent people, which marches at the vanguard of civilization—which proclaimed to the world the principles of liberty and equality—which accomplished the revolutions of 1789 and 1832, against the efforts of European aristocracy—it is pretended that 180,000 of its citizens are worthy or capable of exercising electoral rights. This is to reduce all not included in the number to a nullity. Electoral reform is therefore just and necessary. Nobody can prevent so important a measure. The government has often called the National Guard the safeguard of society: why, then, should the law deny its members the right of electing deputies; as well as the right of holding office? We, in consequence, demand electoral reform, and, without entering into details, demand that every National Guard be an elector!"

SEDUCTION AND DESERTION.—Eliza Moore, an interesting looking girl, aged 18, whose manner and respectability, was brought before Mr. Rogers by police-constable No. 73, G division, charged with being a seducer and desertist. At Constable station, that yesterday morning, at an early hour, on passing through St. John's-square, Clerkenwell, he found the prisoner sitting on the step of a door, and, on questioning her, she said that she had no place to go to. He took her to the police-office, where, in answer to questions by Inspector Dewing, she said that she was living with her friends not far distant from London, when a gentleman, residing in the neighbourhood of Clerkenwell, whose name she refused to mention, paid his addresses to her. Under a promise of marriage, he took her from her home, seduced her, and then deserted her; and being ashamed to return to her friends, she was now wandering about the streets in great distress, and she occasionally lodged temporarily at a house near Charing-cross. She refused to mention who her friends were, although pressed upon the subject. Mr Rogers ordered that she should be taken to the workhouse, and that efforts should be made to discover her friends. She quitted the office in tears.

OPENING OF THE LONDON AND BIRMINGHAM RAILWAY.—The opening, in consequence of the opening of the entire line of the above stupendous and national undertaking, the terminus at Euston grove was at an early hour crowded by a numerous and respectable body of people, who were eager to be present on the memorable occasion of the departure of the first train, which was to start at eight o'clock, and before that time the Duke of Exeter, some foreign guests of distinction, the directors and managers of the company, &c., &c., in addition to many fashionable and elegantly dressed ladies had arrived in their carriages. His Royal Highness, who looked uncommonly well, was with the company.

introduced into the spacious area, and anxiously considered the various arrangements of the order of the carriages. The whole party, however, was not started at eight o'clock on its journey. Shortly after as the concurrence of persons who had arrived was very great, it was found necessary to prepare another train, which consisted of about 16 carriages. At nine o'clock a second train was started, in which was included a number of carriages, in the majority of which there were no passengers. At the same time the railway crowds had collected as usual at the Primrose-hill, who testified their delight by loud congratulations.

LAMENTABLE CATASTROPHE.—THREE CHILDREN DROWNED. A most distressing event occurred on Wednesday evening week, in the parish of Saint Decuman, near Watchet. A Mr. Cape was busy harvesting his corn, and the evening being unusually clear, serene, and beautiful, Mrs. C. said she would go to the beach, and bathe the children.
She then asked them if they were too busy; but they replied that they should not be. Accordingly according took six of the children and the servant with her, leaving the eldest boy to assist his father; this was about six in the evening. About half past nine, Mr. C. having come into the house from the yard, and not finding his wife and family returned, became alarmed for their safety, and went to a neighbouring house to inquire for them, but without success; not hearing anything of them, he proceeded with two or three others, to the beach in search of them, continually calling out to his wife by name, but receiving no answer. The tide had now receded some way. At length he heard a sound near the servant, and on coming nearer he found his wife and eldest, with one child near. Mrs. C. on recognising her husband, exclaimed, "My dear husband, I hope you will forgive me—I have lost three of your children!" The moon had now risen to some height, and the calmness and serenity of the evening were remarkable. The distressing weakened state of Mrs. C., her children, and the servant, and the agonized feelings of the father, are only to be conceived from the appalling nature of this catastrophe. It was supposed that Mrs. C. had reaching the beach, and selecting the intended place for bathing, acted from the idea that the tide was ebbing. After having bathed and dressed

he children still thinking that the tide was ebbing, she went up to one part of the cliff, and sat down, unconscious of the danger she thereby incurred, to look at the interesting scenery around her. The child who stayed with his children some time afterwards observed that the water was washing the two points that formed the extremity of the bay she had selected for bathing; and, immediately becoming alarmed, went to the point nearest to her:—but found she could not get round it, and immediately returned to that part farthest from the water, thinking that the water would recede again. The water, however, still kept rising; and the waves were so high as to sweep over the stones which they stood under water; when one of her children, a little boy of about five years of age, requested his mother to put him up into a hole in the cliff just above them, as he said, that all of them would be drowned.—His mother, with some difficulty, complied with his request; and, in a few minutes, a tremendous swell of the tide washed the three children off Cape; and two of the children remained there, while they were washed from; but three of the younger ones sunk to rise no more. The servant had a child in her arms, about eighteen months old, and, in an endeavour to save another, it was washed away from her and lost. She, however, succeeded in saving one, by holding its clothes firmly in her teeth.—The eldest child was lost was a girl of about six; the infant less than the next year old; and both being yet in the thinnest raiment must have inevitably perished; but it was extremely kind, to view the circumstance the survivors owed their safety. It happened to be one of the highest tides of this spring, and the water rose to an unusual height.—The boy who was put into the hole of the cliff, when taken out, was fast asleep. His body was remained in a distressing state of mind, and in a very weakened state of body ever since.—Tales
