A martyr'd patriot as well,
And grey-haired aged parents' stay.
The murderers were welcome made Within the temple of the Lord :
Ah ! well may we its priest upbraid,
That Hell-fid feed more to be abhorred
O ! let a monument be reared,
To tell the virtue of the dead ;
And vice of his assassins scared,
Under whose hands his spirit fled,
The Priests and Herods of his time,
This many youth have made a mar
Because he sought the right sublime, severely by their enemies, without having the difficulties of their position augmented by their friends—who agree with their object (amalgamation) but differ from their means of seeking it.

For the same reason I discontinue as far as I can the holding of Charlist meetings anywhere, unless for the defence of the imprisoned. Political meetings of the kind of course of physical force only increase their danger, and those in favour of moral force add to their obloquy under which they labour.

After the misrepresentations by the MONTHLY CHURCH of the Farringham Hall meeting, there is good reason to doubt whether Fussell ever uttered the words which FURCH caricatured, and for which Mr Fussell has been imprisoned. The DAILEY NEWS has told us that the TIMES has put into the mouth of Lord Ashley on half more than he has spoken. And it's hardly not so true as to say: "The Times is a paper which has little to hope by: Words were ascribed to Mr Ernest Jones which even the government reporter proved to be never said."

The MANCHESTER NEWS, which enjoyed ubiquitous and something more; it appeared not only in two places, but in three places at once. As the MANCHESTER NEWS it was a Radical journal, and as such, as this edition was struck off, a Tory leader was written, and it appeared in the name of the MANCHESTER NEWS.

MANCHESTER STANDARD, a Conservative paper.

Thirdly, a local Charlist leader was created to supply the place of the Tory one, and lo! it was metamorphosed into the OGDEN NEWS. When I was in OGDEN nature that Europe can admire; and you are encircled by the Alps, and by the sea, these outlines drawn by the finger of God for a giant people. And such you ought to be, or else naught at all. Not one single man of these twenty-four millions shall remain excluded from the ideal part which you frame, but one glance which is not free shall be raised to contemplate the heaven. Be Rome the sacred ark of your redemption: the temple of your nation: has it not already been twice the temple of the destinies of Europe? In Rome two distinct worlds, the Pagan and the world of the Popes, lie superposed one on the other like a double jewel in a diadem. Create a third world rather than the two! From Rome, the Holy City, from the City of Laws (from Rome, the purest, the most sacred of cities, created by the vote and consecrated by the inspiration of a whole people, shall dictate the pact by which you shall be bound as one,

 and represented in the future alliance of peoples.
 Until then you have no country, or you have it contamined.
 Beyond the Alps, beyond the sea, stand other peoples fighting, or making ready to fight with you, the sacred battle of Independence and of Nationality, of Liberty; other peoples, and by different ways to the self-same end, self-reliance, association, the moral formation of an authority which shall put an end to feudal anarchy, that re-inkent earth and Heaven, and which men may
